Lifelong Learning

École Sir John Franklin fosters a culture of lifelong learning by encouraging students to explore their interests, develop new skills, and pursue personal growth. With a wide range of academic, trades, arts, and language programs, students are supported in discovering their strengths and charting individual paths to success.

Staff model a commitment to continuous learning and help students prepare for life beyond high school. Staff engage in ongoing professional development (PD), linking current research to classroom practice and enhancing learning experiences for all students.

Real World Experience

Trades-Specific Training

The underlying goal of École Sir John Franklin High School (SJF) is to connect with, create, and maintain long-standing relationships with students.

Our Applied Design Skills and Technology (ADST) programs provide opportunities for students with aptitudes in almost any area to pursue a variety of different trades. Students link theory and practice, associating and extending the knowledge, skills and attitudes developed in core courses within a practical, personal and relevant context.

Route 51 Learning Centre

This outreach school program offers an alternative setting to daily high school programming. Students can enrol in and complete high school credit courses at Route 51.

Quality Education

SJF's state-of-the-art facility offers a safe and caring environment that supports the unique needs of high school students.

Opportunities abound for students to build skills, gain knowledge, and engage in a rich, multifaceted school experience.

Innovative teaching enhances learning as students travel the globe, attend conferences and participate in locally shared and showcased community service programs.

Programming seeks to develop all aspects of each student's intellectual, physical, social, emotional, cultural and aesthetic needs.
